It is intended to make the SHELBY SENTINEL a first-class Family Newspaper, independent of sect or party, devoted to General News, Literature, and Morality. Appreciating the necessity for a Superior Newspaper in this part of Kentucky, we will bend every energy to make the SHELBY SENTINEL acceptable to all classes. To those who have a distaste for partisan strife, our paper will be a welcome guest. In the angry man's hands it will be a weapon, and in the hands of the peaceful it will be a friend. We will endeavor to heal the wounds, which years of war have caused. To sustain our paper, we naturally expect the assistance and co-operation of the people of Shelby. While the local interests of this section will not be neglected, we will aim to advance the general prosperity of the State.

The general interests and welfare of the county can in no better way be advanced than through the medium of a newspaper. Devoting our attention to all topics of the day, we will freely and independently discuss them. To prevent any misapprehension as to the position which the SHELBY SENTINEL will occupy, we will state that our approval and support will be given to a mild and conciliatory policy, condemning all radical, revolutionary or unjust measures. Believing that this is the only course which will result in permanent prosperity to the country and that these views are such as the people of Kentucky naturally and heartily endorse, we shall uphold and defend them at all times. Firm in the opinion that we can make our paper acceptable, we ask a liberal patronage.

Selected Poetry.

"FATHER, TAKE MY HAND."

The way is dark, my Father! Cloud on cloud
Is gathering thickly o'er my head, and loud
The thunders roar above me—See, I stand
Like one bewildered! Father, take my hand,
And through the gloom
Lead safely home
Thy child!

The day goes fast, my Father! and the night
Is drawing darkly down, my faithless sight
Sees ghastly visions. Fears, a spectral band, Encompass me. O, Father! take my hand,
And from the night
Lead up to light
Thy child!

The way is long, my Father! and my soul
Longs for the rest and quiet of the goal;
While yet I journey through this weary land,
Keep me from wandering. Father, take my hand;
Quickly and straight
Lead to heaven's gate
Thy child!

The path is rough, my Father! Many a thorn
Has pierced me; and my weary feet, all torn
And bleeding, mark the way. Yet the command
Bids me press forward, Father, take my hand
Then, safe and blest,
Lead up to rest
Thy child!

The thorn is great, my Father! Many a doubt
And fear and danger compass me about;
And foes oppress me sore. I cannot stand
Or go alone. O, Father! take my hand,
And through the thorn
Lead safe along
Thy child!

The cross is heavy, Father! I have borne
It long and still do bear it. Let my worn
And fainting spirit rest on that best land
Where crowns are given. Father, take my hand;
And, reaching down,
Lead to heaven
Thy child!

Capital Story.

TEMPER.

"Bedlam let loose! Pandemonium in rebellion! Chaos turned inside out!
What is the reason a man can't be allowed to sleep peacefully in the morning, without this everlasting racket raised about his ears? Children crying—doors slamming
—I will know the reason of all this uproar!"

Mr. Luke Darcy shut the door of his bedroom with considerable emphasis, and went straight to the breakfast-parlor.
All was bright, and quiet, and pleasant there; the coal snapping and sparkling in the grate, the china and silver neatly arranged on the spotless damask cloth, and the green parrot drowsily winking his yellow eyes in the sunny glow of the eastern window—Bedlam plainly wasn't located just there, and Mr. Darcy went stormily up stairs to the nursery.

Ah! the field of battle was reached at last. Mrs. Darcy sat in her little low chair before the fire, trying to quiet the energetic screams of an eight months' old son of the house of Darcy, while another —a rosy boy of five years—lay on his back, prone on the floor, kicking and crying in an ungovernable fit of childish passion.

"Mrs. Darcy!" enunciated Luke, with slow and ominous precision, "may I inquire what all this means? Are you aware that it is fifteen minutes past nine o'clock?
Do you know that breakfast is waiting?"
"I know, Luke—I know," said poor perplexed Mrs. Darcy, striving vainly to lift the rebellious urethra up by one arm.
"Come, Freddy, you're going to be good, now, mamma is sure, and get up to be washed."

"No—o—o!" roared Master Freddy, performing a brisk tattoo on the carpet with his heels, and clashing the air furiously.
Like an avenging vulture, Mr. Darcy pounced abruptly down on his son and heir, carried him promptly to the closet, and turned the key upon his screams.

"Now, sir, you cry out at your leisure.
Evelyn, nurse is waiting for the baby.
We'll go down stairs to breakfast."
"But, Luke," hesitated Mrs. Darcy,
"you won't leave Freddy there?"
"Won't I? I'd like to know why? It's temper, and nothing else, that is the attitude of all these demonstrations, and I'll conquer that temper, or I'll know the reason why. It ought to have been checked long ago, but you are ridiculously indulgent. There's nothing I have so little tolerance for as a bad temper—nothing that ought to be so promptly and severely dealt with."

"But if he'll say he's sorry, Luke?"
Mr. Darcy rapped sharply at the panel of the door.
"Are you sorry for your naughtiness,
young man?"
A fresh outburst of screams and a renewal of the tattoo was all the answer.
"I'm sure he's sorry, Luke," pleaded the all-extenuating mother, but Mr. Darcy shook his head.

"Entire submission is the only thing I will listen to," he said, shortly. "I tell you, Evelyn, I am determined to uproot this temper!"
And Evelyn, with a dewy moisture shadowing her eye-lashes, and a dull ache at her heart, followed her liege lord down to the breakfast table, with a little appetite for the coffee and toast and eggs as might be.

A tall, blue-eyed young lady, with the profusion of bright chestnut hair, and cheeks like rose velvet, was already at the table when they descended, by name Clara Pruyn, by lineage Mrs. Darcy's sister.

She opened her blue eyes rather wide as the two entered.

"Good gracious, Evely, what's the matter?"
"Nothing," answered Luke, tartly.
"Mrs. Darcy, you appear to forget that I have eaten no breakfast."

"Something is the matter, though," said
Clara, shrewdly.
"What is it, Evelyn? Has Luke had one of his tantrums?"

Luke set down his coffee cup with a sharp "clink."
"You use very peculiar expressions, Miss Pruyn."

"Very true ones," said Clara, saucily.
Evelyn smiled in spite of herself.

"It's only Freddy, who feels a little cross, and—"

"A little cross!" interrupted the indignant husband. "I tell you, Evelyn, it's quite time that temper was checked. Oh!
that parrot! what an intolerable screeching he keeps up! Mary, take that bird into the kitchen, or I shall be tempted to wring its neck. Strange that a man can't have a little peace once in a while! What does all these eggs, Evelyn? I thought I asked you to see that they were boiled fit for Christians to eat."

Mr. Darcy gave his egg, shell and all, a vindictive throw upon the grate. Evelyn's brown eyes sparkled dangerously as she observed the maneuver, but she made no remark.

"And the plates are as cold as a stone, when I've implored, again and again, that they might be warmed. Well, I shall eat no breakfast this morning."

"Whom will you punish most?" demanded Miss Clara. "Evelyn, give me another cup of coffee—it is perfectly delightful."

Luke pushed his chair back with a vengeance, and took up his stand with his back to the fire, both hands under his coat-tails.

"Please, sir," said the servant, deprecatingly advancing, "the gas bill—the man says would you settle it while—"

"No!" roared Luke, tempestuously.
"Tell the man to go about his business;
I'll have no small bills this morning, and I won't be so persecuted!"

Mary retreated precipitately. Clara raised her long, brown eyelashes.
"Do you know, Luke," she said, de-murely, "I think you would feel a great deal better if you would just do as Freddy does—lie flat down on the floor, and kick your heels against the carpet for a while.
It's an excellent escape valve when your choler gets the better of you."

Luke gave his mischievous sister-in-law a glance that ought certainly to have annihilated her, and walked out of the room, closing the door behind him with a bang that would bear no interpretation.
Then Clara came round to her sister's side, and buried her pink face in Evelyn's neck.

"Don't scold me Evely, please—I know I've been very naughty to tease Luke so!"
"You have spoken nothing but the truth," said Evelyn, quietly, with her coral lips compressed, and a scarlet spot burning on either cheek. "Clara, I sometimes wonder how I can endure the daily cross of my husband's temper!"

"Temper!" said Clara, with a toss of her chestnut brown hair. "And the poor dewy fellow hasn't the least idea how disagreeable he makes himself!"

"Only this morning," said Evelyn, "he punished Freddy with unrelenting severity for a fit of ill-humor which he himself has duplicated within the last half hour. I am not a moralist, but it strikes me that the fault is rather more to be censured in a full-grown reasoning man than in a child."

"Evelyn," said Clara, gravely, "do you suppose he is beyond the power of a cure?"
"I hope not; but what can I do? Shut him up as he shut little Freddy?"

Evelyn's merry, merry, irresistible laugh was checked by the arch, peculiar expression in Clara's blue eyes.

"The remedy needs to be something short and sharp," said Clara, "and the dark closet system certainly combines both requisites. Tears and hysterics are played out long ago in matrimonial skirmishes, you know, Evely."

"Nonsense!" laughed Mrs. Darcy, rising from the breakfast-table in obedience to her husband's peremptory summons from above stairs, while Clara shrugged her shoulders and went to look for her work-basket.

Luke was standing in front of his bureau drawer, flinging shirts, collars, cravats and stockings recklessly on the bedroom floor.

"I'd like to know where my silk handkerchiefs are, Mrs. Darcy!" he fumed.
"Such a state as my bureau is in! It's enough to drive a man crazy!"

"It's enough to drive a woman crazy,
I think!" said Evelyn, hopelessly, stooping to pick up a few of the scattered articles. "You were at the bureau last, Luke.
It's your own fault!"

"My fault—of course it's my fault!"
snarled Luke, giving Mrs. Darcy's poodle a kick that sent it howling to its mistress.
"Anything but a woman's retorting, re-minutiae tongue. Mrs. Darcy, I won't endure it any longer!"

"Neither will I!" said Evelyn, resolutely advancing, as her husband plunged in to the closet for his business coat, and promptly shutting and locking the door.
"I think I've endured it quite long enough
—and here's an end to it!"

"Mrs. Darcy, open the door!" said

Luke, scarcely able to credit the evidence of his own sense.

"I shall do no such thing," said Mrs.
Darcy, composedly, beginning to re-arrange shirts, stockings, and flannel wrappers in their appropriate receptacles.

"Mrs. Darcy!" roared Luke, at a fever-heat of impotent rage, "what on earth do you mean?"

"I mean to keep you in that cloth-press, Mr. Darcy, until you have made up your mind to come out in a more amiable frame of mind. If the system succeeds with Freddy, it certainly ought to with you; and I am sure your temper is proving much more intolerable than his!"

There was a dead silence of full sixty seconds in the closet, then a sudden burst of vocal wrath.

"Mrs. Darcy! open the door this instant, madam!"

But Evelyn went on humming a saucy little opera air, and arranging clothes.

"Do you hear me?"

"Yes—I hear you."

"Will you obey me?"

"Not until you have solemnly promised me to put some sort of control on that temper of yours; not until you pledge yourself hereafter to treat your wife as a lady should be treated, not as a menial."

"I won't!"

"No! Then in that case I hope you don't find the atmosphere at all oppressive there, as I think it probable you will remain some time!"

Another sixty seconds of dead silence, then a sudden rain of heels and hands against the relentless wooden panels.

"Let me out, I say, Mrs. Darcy! Madam, how dare you perpetrate this monstrous piece of audacity?"

"My dear Luke, how strongly you remind me of Freddy! You see, there's nothing I have so little tolerance for as a bad temper. It ought to have been check-ed long ago, only you know I'm so ridiculously indulgent."

Mr. Darcy winced a little at the familiar sound of his own words.

Tap-tap-tap came softly to the door.
Mrs. Darcy composedly opened it, and saw her husband's little office boy.

"Please, mem, there's some gentlemen
at the office in a great hurry to see Mr.
Darcy. It's about the Applegate will case."

Mrs. Darcy hesitated an instant; there was a triumphant rustle in the closet, and her determination was taken.

"Tell the gentlemen that your master has a very bad head ache, and won't be down to-day this morning."

Luke gnashed his teeth audibly; as soon as the closing of the door admonished him that he might do so with safety.

"Mrs. Darcy, do presume to interfere with the transaction of business that is vitaly important, ma'am—vitaly important!"

Mrs. Darcy nonchalantly took up the little opera air where she had left it, letting the soft Italian words ripple musically off her tongue.

"Evelyn, dear!"

"What is it, Luke?" she asked, mildly.

"Please let me out. My dear, this may be a joke to you, but—"

"I assure you, Luke, it's nothing of the kind; it's the soberest of serious matters to me. It is a question as to whether my future life shall be miserable or happy."

There was a third interval of silence.

"Evelyn," said Luke presently, in a subdued voice, "will you open the door?"

The Shelby Sentinel,

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

BY JOHN T. HEARN.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3.

Independent of sectarian or partisan attachment, free to criticize, condemn, or approve, any and all measures that may come up for discussion.

The Age of Humbugs.

Ovid sang of the age of gold, of iron, and of brass; did he live now, the burden of his song would be the prevailing mania for humbugs. That there are men whose only avocation is to dupe and to swindle, is made patent by every day experience. The practice is considered of so much importance that it is reduced to a study, which engages the attention of men of sharp but perverted intellect, and is made to pay a handsome return. Our large cities are the homes of the majority of these unprincipled men, who prey upon the credulity of their fellows, while everywhere through the country they have their imitators. The American Agriculturist, of New York, is doing the country good service in exposing the humbugs which abound not only in that city, but throughout the country. Unprincipled impostors, who consider that to take advantage of another, is the highest aim of human existence, ply their ignoble avocation with energy.

We have seen circulars written in the most plausible manner, addressed with confidential injunctions, evincing a heart-felt interest in the welfare of those to whom they were sent. In some cases, lucky lottery tickets are sent to parties, which it is shown, have drawn fortunes, and all that is necessary for the person addressed to receive this, is to forward five or ten dollars. This is but one of the many designs by which honest men are made to support dishonest ones. Newspapers should refuse to publish advertisements which are evidently attempts to defraud the public. This would lessen, to a considerable extent, the evil with which the country is afflicted.

In consequence, the mails are filled with circulars, and newspapers are frequently made to present by specious advertisements, rare schemes and wonderful displays of generosity. That man who wished to confer a great benefit for the value of a few postage stamps, and whose "Sands of life" were running out, has a few more left and still follows his miserable calling. Dealers in "one dollar watches," proprietors of "gift enterprises," are preying upon the industry of others, and living upon the hard earnings of the unsuspecting. Persons ignorant of the world's wicked ways are easily deluded by these wicked schemers, and are taught lessons in experience which it were well to heed. The paper to which we have referred states that in consequence of the general exposure of these swindlers in northern states, they are losing ground there, but are turning their attention to the South and West. To avert their operations, the press should take up the subject and by determined and untiring vigilance expose the nefarious schemes of those who would plunder our fellow citizens, and drive them from their wicked employment.

HOME NEWS.—Desiring to make the Sentinel, a live newspaper, we ask our subscribers to send us the news of their respective sections, and especially from the counties of Shelby, Henry, Spencer, Oldham and Owen. We would be pleased if some friend in each neighborhood, would keep us posted as to the news of his section. Tell us of the marriages, deaths, murders, accidents, fires, stock sales, and in fact every thing that can be called news.

The circulation of the Sentinel is increasing, our advertising patronage is very good, and we are encouraged by the success which our enterprise has achieved. We ask our friends to continue their efforts in our behalf, and we will devote ourselves unceasingly to their interests. See the very liberal premiums offered for subscribers, and then get up a club.

Now is the time to advertise. The fall trade is opening; let the people see who are liberal and who are not.

The Owen County Fair was well attended and some fine stock shown. Ten thousand persons were in attendance the last day.

Mr. Joseph Hornsby of Shelby, took the premiums in the following rings: Harness Horses, Stallions, best, four year old and over, premium $10. Harness Stallions, best, any age, premium, $20. Sweep Stake Ring, Best Harness Stallions, any age, premium $20. Fastest trotting animal, one mile, 2 45 1/2, premium, $50. Hurra for Shelby!

The remains of the Confederate Prisoners, shot by order of Gen. Burbridge, at Pleasantville, Ky., in the year 1864, will be removed to the Cemetery at Eminence, Ky., on Friday, October 5th, 1866. Religious services will be held on the occasion. Every one is respectfully invited to attend.

Miscellaneous:

Kentucky and Her Agricultural Interests.

We are indebted to the Louisville Democrat for an interesting statement of facts and figures in reference to the agricultural interests of our State, which we give below. It will be seen that Shelby is ahead of any other county in the State in the amount produced of Corn, Oats, Rye, and Butter:

As the second State admitted under the Federal Constitution, Kentucky stands high in point of agricultural interests among her sister States of the great West. With a length of three hundred and eight miles from east to west, a breadth of one hundred and seventy-two miles, she has an area of 37,680 square miles, or 24,115,200 acres, thus constituting about one thirtieth of the whole surface of the United States. As an agricultural State, Kentucky ranks high. Her climate and her soil are unexceptionable. She is blessed with mineral treasures of the rarest kind and in the richest profusion. As a stock-raising country she is far ahead of any of the Western States. Her social, moral and intellectual standard is high; and, though she has suffered from the internal commotions attendant upon the recent civil war, she will soon regain her lost ground, and rank higher than ever. The present season, in regard to health and prosperity in agriculture, has been an exception, for the moderate rains of August and September will not only injure the crops, but will cause a great diminution in the salubrity of the climate. Under the prosperity of ordinary seasons Kentucky cannot but increase her agricultural wealth, and become the pioneer State of the great Mississippi basin.

We propose to give a few agricultural statistics, taken from classified items gleaned from the census bureau of 1860, with a comparison of the agricultural condition at the present time, which, though not strictly reliable, will convey information of much interest to the reader.

CULTIVATED AND UNCULTIVATED LANDS.
The cultivated and uncultivated farms of Kentucky, classified under the heads of improved and unimproved lands, are stated in the census returns of 1860 as follows: The number of acres of improved lands are 7,644,208 acres; of unimproved lands, 11,519,053 acres. The largest number of acres of improved land under cultivation are in Bourbon county, being 176,916, and the smallest number in Jackson county, being 12,992 acres. Of unimproved land, Harlan county gives the largest number, 341,051 acres, and Fayette county 1,003, which is the smallest number.—The cash valuation of these lands in 1860 was $291,496,355, of which Fayette county lands were the largest valuation, being $13,431,717, and Jackson county the smallest valuation, being $255,526. The depreciation of these lands since the close of the war has been estimated, from recent statistics, to be about 15 per cent. in valuation, which would make them valued at the present time about $276,000,000.—The improved lands in Bourbon county have not decreased in value, and are fully worth what the census of 1860 represents them to be.

FARM PRODUCTS.
The farm products of the State, taken during the last census, were as follows:

Bushels.	Largest yield.	Smallest yield.
Wheat.....	7,394,809 Bourbon co.	Jackson co.
Rye.....	1,053,560 Shelby "	Perry "
Oats.....	6,040,523 Shelby "	Jackson "

The total number of farm products in bushels in the year 1860 was 80,596,522. Bourbon county leads in wheat, and Shelby in rye, corn and oats. Jefferson county yields the heaviest crop of Irish potatoes. The grain and potato crops of the present year will depreciate over one twentieth, so it is estimated by agricultural statisticians. In 1860 Kentucky was rated as the tenth best producing wheat State in the Union. In peas and beans she produced more than any other Western State during the last census.

The grass crop in 1860 was very heavy, and the census report of 1860 returns for the State 158,476 tons. Jefferson county giving the largest and Perry the smallest yield. The grass of 1866 has been a very heavy yield, producing over 145,000 tons. We will also give to our readers further statistics of farm products as follows:

Largest Yield.	Smallest Yield.
Hay, tons of.....	40,409 Garrard co.

In regard to flax, Kentucky in 1850 was the largest flax-producing State in the Union. To 1860 it had decreased 1,750,000 lbs. and in 1865 150,000 lbs. more. The crop of 1866 is not estimated, but it is thought it is on the increase. As a wool State, Kentucky produces some of the finest wool in the Union, and is fourth among the other States in the raising of wool. The wine crop, too, is increasing. In 1861 there were only two vineyards in operation in the State—one at Lexington and the other at Glasgow. Now there are from 60 to 70 vineyards in the State, which will yield this year about 200,000 gallons.

LIVE STOCK.
The live stock of Kentucky exceeds any other Western State in point of quality and value. Her race-horses are world-renowned, and her record on the American turf stands highest of any State in the

Miscellaneous:

Union. She is the largest mule raising State, and her imported and native cattle cannot be excelled. Her sheep are celebrated for their fine quality of wool, and Bourbon county can exhibit as fine stock of this kind as can be found in any part of the United States. As a grazing State, Kentucky is a perfect paradise for animals, especially in the blue-grass region, and this with the climate and water, renders it one of the best stock-raising States in the West. We take from the census bureau the statistics of live stock for the year 1860, which are as follows:

Largest.	No. Raised.	Smallest.	No. Raised.
Asses and mules.....	117,634 Madison co.	Jackson co.
Horses.....	355,704 Madison "	Powell "
Cattle.....	269,215 Owen "	Calloway "
Working oxen.....	108,199 Graves "	Powell "
Other cattle.....	457,845 Bourbon "	Powell "
Sheep.....	938,990 Pulaski "	Boyd "
Swine.....	2,330,595 Hardin "

The total valuation of this live stock in 1860 was $61,868,237 50.

By reference to a schedule of returns made by assistant Marshals, not entered on the schedules of the agricultural statistics of the State, we find the following additions:

Asses and mules, 18,427; horses, 61,209; cattle, 128,045; sheep, 66,161, and swine, 234,255. Taking this addition of 509,097, with the list of 1860, amounting to 4,578,582, and we have a total of 5,087,678, which should be the true number of live stock for the year ending 1860. But since the last census there has been the following estimated decrease in this live stock, caused by the ravages of war and demand of stock for military use:

Hogs, over 400,000; sheep, 135,000; horses, 84,000; mules, 22,000, and cattle of all kinds, 178,000. The statistics of stock in Kentucky, up to January, 1864, show this decrease by the following table:

Horses.....	272,875
Cattle.....	294,627
Cows.....	425,143
Mules.....	191,495
Sheep.....	774,667
Hogs.....	1,922,701

IMPORTED STOCK.
The first introduction of English cattle into the West was made by Matthew Patton into Kentucky, in 1794, from Virginia. In 1800 John Patton, son of Matthew, removed into Ohio, taking a portion of his stock with him. A few remained in Kentucky of the long-horn kind, but the people seemed afraid of them, and it was not until 1817 that Messrs. Saunders, Zugerden & Co. imported a drove of 5 bulls, 3 short-horns and 2 long-horns, and 8 or 9 cows of both breeds. The short-horn breed seemed to be the favorites of the people, and from 1832 to 1836 improved breeds of short-horns began to be introduced. Ayrshire, Devon and Hereford cattle have been largely introduced since, and the breed of pure and mixed cattle in Kentucky cannot be excelled by any other Western State. The Kentucky stud of imported horses is too well known to require any comment, and the long-wooled Silesian, Cotswold and Merino sheep at her agricultural fairs have taken the highest premiums. The Cashmere goat has but recently been introduced into the State, and they are raised successfully at Frankfort, Russellville, Paris and Georgetown. On the blue-grass region of Kentucky may be seen at the present time as fine imported and native stock of all kinds as in any other section of the Union.

OTHER STATISTICS.
There are also a vast amount of manufacturers at home, the valuation of the census of 1860 estimating them at 2,095,578. Of these, Calloway county gives the largest amount, and Campbell the smallest. The number of animals slaughtered, such as hogs, sheep and cattle, amounts to $11,640,738, a large proportion of which is credited to the city of Louisville. Pork packing is becoming a large and increasing branch of business at the Falls City. Jefferson county represents the largest amount slaughtered, and Rowen the least. Several manufacturing of agricultural implements have been started in this city. Christian county, during 1860, had the largest capital invested in the manufacture of agricultural implements and machinery, which amounted to $246,719, and Jackson the smallest, being only $3,601.

What is Intended.

The calm, dispassionate editorials of the venerable National Intelligencer, are always worthy of consideration; and particularly so at this time, when it is recognized as the organ of the President, and is supposed to reflect his views upon matters of public policy. It fully understands the purposes and aims of the radicals, and it exposes, with an unsparing hand, the programme they have laid down for their guidance. In this connection, the following article is well worthy of attention:

"The country is evidently entering upon a new and more dangerous phase of the political agitation with which this land has been convulsed for the last ten years. For a considerable time the object to be attained by political agitation was the restriction of slavery with its then existing limits. When the war broke out, the country slid gradually into emancipation as a military measure. Then the point to be attained on the slavery question was emancipation, with equality of civil rights for the emancipated. President Lincoln, then whom there was no better exponent in the country of the sentiment of the great party which he represented, by his dispatch to ex-Governor Hahn, of Louisiana, suggesting, in the gentlest manner imaginable, for his private consideration, the expediency of admitting the freedmen to a limited suffrage, opens to our view the ideas of the dominant party at that time. We have now passed all that by. The radicals do not propose equality of suffrage, limited without regard to color. They have advanced beyond that. Now they demand universal negro suffrage. What they are aiming at is not merely universal negro suffrage, but, superadded to this, exclusion from suffrage of all who were compromised in the rebellion. The direct practical purpose in view is to put the white race South under the negro. The negro element is to be taken as loyal and put in power. The first step in this programme is to do what the Radical leaders have done in New Orleans—get up an agitation in the name of negro equality. If the whites yield to this, which agitation is made as dangerous as possible by inflaming and arming the negroes, then, by a series of revolutionary juntas, called conventions, the entire structure of society at the South is to be reversed, and the negro put at the top. If the whites make a struggle, then a chance incident or two, thrown like sparks into a magazine, produce an explosion, and the country is convulsed with horror at the barbarities inflicted on the poor negro.

Miscellaneous:

"This is a conception worthy of Machiavelli, or his Satanic Majesty himself. If the Revolutionists, in the efforts to overthrow a State government, are let alone, by a little political legerdemain the existing State institutions and authorities will be subverted, and the Revolutionists in possession of the political power. And they are sure of their prompt recognition by the dominant party in Congress.

"Suppose, on the other hand, this revolutionary violence produces collision, and blood flows: so much the better. It shows the animus of the South; the North must rally to the rescue, or the country is ruined.

"The radicals, therefore, are playing a game which they think is sure to win. "If they can overthrow the existing State governments South, and put power nominally in the hands of the negroes, the gain is all to them, for the negroes and the handful of white revolutionists directing the negroes will only be puppets in their hands.

"If the effort to overturn the State governments produces violent collisions between the two races, then they think they have a winning card in the next elections.

"It is with these political advantages in view that a new agitation is being inaugurated South. It will manifest itself, sooner or later, in some shape or other in all the Southern cities. The place to try the next experiment of this kind is Charleston, South Carolina. So we may expect something from Charleston. A riot there, in which fifty or one hundred negroes were killed, and some outrage committed on the United States flag would pay admirably."

Deaths.

[From the La Grange (Texas New Era).]
DIED.—In Washington county, on the morning of the 10th inst, JOHN ALLEN, infant son of James W. and Addie M. Matthews.

In the garden of our affections there sprang up a little bud, which, giving much promise for the future, it was the joy of our life to cherish; but the unsparring frosts of Death swept over, and our little bud was no more. Not lost, however, for, with perennial vigor and beauty crowned, we shall find our little one transplanted in the garden of Paradise.

DIED.—On Monday morning, Sept. 24, SAMUEL ARNOLD, only child of Will. J. and Sallie L. Wallace, aged two months and 21 days.

The Administratrix Sale of the personal property of Joseph R. Stanley, deceased, is on Tuesday, October 16th. See advertisement.

We would call attention to the Farms offered for sale by Messrs. Oglesby and Wight, advertised in this issue.

The Salvia Fair was a splendid affair. The show of stock was fine. Things went off well, and three men were shot.

Mr. Robert Doak has placed us under many obligations, by sending us a basket of fine large sweet potatoes, and other luxuries which the palate of an editor can well appreciate.

We refer our readers to the advertisement of the well known firm of Blackiston & Fishback. They are in receipt of a new Stock of Boots, Shoes, and other goods.

Third and last call. Those who have not paid their Internal Revenue Tax, are reminded that they should pay up soon as they will have cost to pay after Oct. 20. See notice.

The members of the Base Ball Club are notified that the regular meetings are held on the last Thursday night of each month. Tuesday and Friday evenings of each week are the regular evenings for practicing. All absentees will be fined.

John Cornwell, a citizen of Bullitt county, was robbed and murdered two miles from his residence, on last Sunday morning. He was nearly sixty years of age and was highly respected by all who knew him.

Huge Mushroom.—Mr. W. S. Johnson has left at our office a mushroom which measures in circumference forty inches. For a mushroom, that's large. If it was a pumpkin, there is no telling how many pies it would make.

The Catholic Church at this place has secured a splendid Organ, manufactured entirely in Louisville. The Democrat of yesterday, "says this instrument for richness of tone, equal, if not exceeds any we have ever heard."

The conspicuous advertisement of B. B. Ross is worthy attention. Mr. Ross keeps a large and well selected stock of Drugs, Books and fancy articles, which he sells at reasonable prices. Liberal advertising is a guarantee of liberal dealing.

The Field and Fire Side.—This excellent weekly is worthy the extensive patronage it receives. We will take pleasure in sending subscriptions for those who desire this paper, the character of which we have referred to before Published at Raleigh, North Carolina.

The Land We Love.—This new Southern Periodical is another worthy candidate for success. It is edited by Gen. D. H. Hill, which will assure popularity. The contents of the September number are of varied interest, comprising articles upon the late war, with literary and scientific papers, by well known Southern authors.

An extensive fire occurred in Jeffersonville Penitentiary, Monday evening, which destroyed the work shops of that institution, involving a total loss of $215,000, of this amount Hall, Moore & Miller of Louisville lost $150,000 and Noch and Son of Louisville $50,000.

Our Louisville Exchanges of yesterday report the decease of the following prominent men; Hon. Henry A. Burnett died of cholera on Saturday last, near Hopkinsville Ky., Ben. R. Pollard a well known citizen of Louisville died in Mississippi, a few days since; and it is reported that Hon. Charles L. Moorehead died recently in Mississippi.

Who wouldn't be an Editor? That new hat which sets so gracefully upon our editorial head, was presented to us by Mr. James A. Hope, of the firm of Hope & Middleton. Mr. H. has just returned from the East, where he purchased a very large stock of goods, among others, our hat.—Gentlemen if you want a good hat, examine those at Hope & Middleton's. Ladies if you want splendid goods, and latest styles, go to the same place. We have been there, and we know.

Shelby Circuit Court is still in progress. Owing to the condition of Capt. Ed. Terrill's health, his case was continued to the next term. His counsel, Gen. W. C. Whitaker, W. C. Bullock, Esq., Judge T. H. Burnett, and Col. M. C. Taylor, applied for bail, and succeeded in obtaining it, a special bailiff being required to give bond of $5000, and being required to furnish a certificate of a good physician every week to the Sheriff of Shelby, as to his condition. His honor Judge Johnson reserving the right to remand Terrill to jail, whenever his wounds will admit of it. The case of Thompson, charged with complicity with Terrill in the murder, was continued. The negro Geo. Hall, charged with the murder of Mr. Merick in this county, had not been decided up to the hour of going to press.

KENTUCKY STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.—The first annual meeting of this Association will convene in the Chestnut-street Presbyterian Church, Louisville, Ky., on Wednesday, October 17th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and continue through Thursday and Friday, October 18th and 19th.

Pastors, Superintendents and Sunday School Teachers in the State are cordially invited to attend and participate in the deliberations of this body.

Devotional exercises and addresses from distinguished Sunday School men, from this and other States, and discussions of such practical subjects as tend most to advance the Sunday School cause throughout the State, will constitute the exercises of the meeting. All experienced teachers know the great importance of learning the best methods of controlling and instructing their classes. We say to them, that in order to make our meeting the greatest possible benefit to teachers, we expect to have the following model exercises conducted by persons of large experience and success in the Sunday School work, viz: The model Teacher; Superintendent; Sunday School opening; Infant Class; Teacher's Meeting; and Bible Class.

Let a delegate, or delegates, male or female, be sent from every Sunday School in Kentucky. Send, also, a report containing the following items in writing, viz: Name of the school with its location and county; name and post-office of the superintendent; average attendance of teachers and pupils during the past year; number of verses of Scripture committed to memory, and number of persons received into the Church from the school for the same time; and the names of the delegates to this Convention. If possible, send the written report to Theodore Brown (President Louisville and Jefferson County Sabbath School Convention), Louisville, Ky., before October 12th.

We expect the opening exercises on Wednesday evening to be very interesting and of great value. Be prompt in attendance.

The committee of arrangements will be at the church, corner of Fourth and Chestnut streets, for the purpose of assigning delegates their homes during the sessions of the Convention.

Arrangements have been made to secure free return tickets from all the railroads and regular steamboat lines.

The publishers of all papers, religious and secular, who feel an interest in the young and in the welfare of State, are earnestly requested to give this invitation a place in their columns and call the attention of their readers to it.

All Pastors and Superintendents in the State will please have this call read to their congregations and Sunday schools on the two Sabbaths immediately preceding the meeting.

Sunday School Associations are accomplishing wonderful results all over the country; let not this, our noble old Commonwealth, fail to reap from them a rich harvest of blessings.

Southern Affairs—A Plea for Peace.

Ex-Governor Letcher, of Virginia, delivered an address at Lexington, Va., on the occasion of the reinauguration of the statue of Washington, at the Virginia Military Institute, in the course of which he said:

The Southern people regard the question at issue as settled; and for ever settled. They accept the result and are prepared to abide by it in good faith. They pledge an honor that is untarnished, and when brave men and honest men give such a pledge, who can doubt their sincerity, and who can hesitate that their pledge will be redeemed to the letter?

No government can endure which does not rest upon the affections of its people. A wise, just, tolerant, upright administration of public affairs will win back the affections of the South and entwine them around the pillars that uphold the Union as the "clasping ivy" encircles the majestic oak. Kindness begets kindness—confidence inspires confidence—charity and tolerance generates love and affection.—Let all these ennobling virtues be cultivated and encouraged. If the scenes of the last four years cannot be forgotten by either side, let them be, at least, forgiven, and passed by in solemn, dignified silence. Let each side cease to remind the other of the disagreeable incidents that occurred during that sad but eventful period.

Let us then be of good cheer. Let no one be disheartened or discouraged. We must all do our duty in a faithful, independent and manly way, and then we may reasonably anticipate a bright and happy future for ourselves, our posterity and our country.

It should be the policy of all to inculcate a spirit of concord, and so act each to the other as to advance the common interest of all. We should do everything in our power to secure the prosperity of the nation, augment its wealth, develop its boundless mineral and other resources, arouse up its dormant energies, multiply its channels of intercommunication, encourage agricultural, mechanical and manufacturing industry. This is due to ourselves as well as those who are to come after us, and who look to us for the adoption of a policy that will place them before the world in the most advantageous position. Let us deal candidly, fairly, honestly, justly and charitably one with another, and then, kneeling around the altar of common country, let a united prayer ascend to Heaven "God bless America."

A little boy nine years old was recently before a Paris Court for murder.

News from Japan informs us that rice has fallen "two boos per picul," if anybody knows what that means.

The Power of Love.

Not all the sentimental works that have been written, nor the love sick verses that have been run into rhyme, convey so adequate an idea of the power and influence of human love, as the little incidents of daily life presents.

Gough, the great temperance lecturer asserts that in the case of hard and sottish drunkards, seemingly lost to all sense of manhood, there is frequently evinced the silent, though powerful influence of love. In some cases the attempt to find manhood, is difficult, but energetic efforts are sure to conquer, and the power and presence of love shows that the man is not a brute.

Charles Dickens says:—"Away up a great many pairs of stairs, in a very remote corner, easily passed by, there is a door, and on that door is written, 'Woman.'"

And Gough adds this comment, illustrated by a pleasing incident.

"And so in the heart of the vilest outcast, away up a great many pairs of stairs, in a remote corner, easily passed by, there is a door upon which is written, 'Man.'"

Here is our business—to find that door. It may take a long time; but begin and knock. Don't get tired; but remember God's long suffering for us; and keep knocking a long time if need be. Don't get weary if there is no answer, remember Him whose locks were wet with the dew. Knock on—just try it—your try it; and just so sure, by and by, will the quivering lip and starting tear tell you you have been knocking at the heart of a man, and not of a brute. It is because these poor wretches are men, and not brutes, that we have hopes of them.

I once picked up a man in the market place. They said, "He is a brute—let him alone." I took him home with me, and kept the "brute" fourteen days and nights through his delirium, and he nearly frightened my wife out of her wits, one night chasing her all about the house with a boot in his hand. But she recovered her wits, and he recovered his.

He said to me: "You wouldn't think I had a wife and child, would you?"

"Well, I shouldn't."

"I have, and God bless her little heart—my little Mary is as pretty a little thing as ever stepped," said the brute.

I asked, "Where do you live?"

"Two miles from here."

"When did you see them last?"

"Two years ago."

Then he told me his sad story. I said, "You must go back again."

"I can't go back. My wife is better without me, I have struck her, and kicked her, and abused her. Can I go back again?"

I went with him to his house. I knocked at the door, and his wife opened it.

"Is this Mrs. Richardson?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Well, that is Mr. Richardson; and Mr. Richardson, this is Mrs. Richardson. Now come into the house."

They went in. The wife sat on one side of the room and the "brute" on the other. I waited to see who would speak first, and it was the woman. But before she spoke she fidgeted a good deal. She pulled up her apron till she got hold of a hem, and then she pulled it all down again.—Then she folded it up close, and jerked it out through her fingers an inch at a time, and then she spread it all down again; and she looked all about the room, and said, "Well, William."

The "brute" said, "Well Mary."

He had a large handkerchief around his neck, and his wife said, "You had better take the handkerchief off, William, you'll need it when you go out."

He began to fumble about it; the knot was large enough; he could have untied it if he liked; but he said, "Will you untie it Mary?"

She worked away at it, but her fingers were too clumsy, too, and she could not get it off.

While thus occupied their eyes met.—The love-light was not all quenched. She opened her arms gently and he fell into them.

If you had seen those white arms clasped about his neck, and he sobbing on her breast, and the child looking in wonder, first at one and then at the other, you would have said, "It is not a 'brute,' but a man, with a great, big, warm heart in his bosom."

A Washington special says there has been a good deal of mystery touching the appointment of General Dix as Minister to France. The key of this appointment is to be found in the recent advances from Europe relative to the Mexican question. Mr. Bigelow has become too strongly committed to the Imperial side of the Mexican question to fit him as the representative of the United States; hence his retirement, and the appointment of Dix in his stead. The General is prepared to take much bolder ground on the question of French occupation of Mexico than Mr. Bigelow, under the inspiration of the Secretary of State, has felt himself justified in assuming.

In Berlin, the man who could get no friendly hand two months ago to disarm his assassin, is the miracle to-day. His picture is by this time in all your shop windows, but they do not convey the height of the man, with his proportions, nor make him speak as I have heard him to-day. Bismark in stature as in method, measuring evenly six feet two inches in height, and weighing not less than two hundred and fifty pounds. Count Bismark is entirely a Prussian in physiognomy, and his port and strength are feudal in their imperiousness. Seated in an office chamber of the great Schloss, or King's palace, with clerks in the ante-rooms, couriers in spurs at the hall, ready to carry his orders, a table before him filled with blanks, reports and newspapers, and the light from the screened windows falling fairly on his seated figure, you behold, in common business dress, a man who might pass for fifty years of age, half bald, smooth of face, save a short and heavy mustache of grayish brown, that quite overlooks the hard-shut, ponderous mouth, and a nose of insignificant length, but broad and proud nostrilled.

His flesh is in excess, so that around the eyes it is puffy and creased, and his short, stony, and undimpled chin drops a huge doubled-fold upon his breast. His eyebrows are jagged; if they were heavier over the blood-shot eyes he would be terrible. At the back of his deep cheeks a pair of stiff bull-dog's ears stand out to stop all the winds and their rumors, and his hands and feet that are determined even in rest, are large enough to win a woman's censure. So dark that he looks freckled away from the light; so his face and yet so massive that he looks like a panther in granite; this man would better befit a baron's trencher where his vassals eat and tremble, than sit here on the waxed floors of a modern palace doing desk duty.

I expect that he would remind me of Stanton, but he much resembled Butler. Stand General Butler on a chair to help his stature, prop his eyes open and give him power, and you have the nearest resemblance to Count Bismark that I can think of among American leaders. Near by him, on a rosewood table, lay a Prussian officer's helmet, and if he had put it on, I think that Front de Boeuf would have been before me in armor.

"THE TRUE KING."—There is truth and beauty in this tribute to humble worth by BECHER. 'Tis not alone those who stand on fame's glittering heights that may be classed as heroes, or those who wear brilliant earthly crowns that may claim the title of Kings.

"Where a person that is poor, that is out of health, that is surrounded by many discouragements, and that is made to suffer in various ways, lifts himself above his misfortunes, and cheers his companion and children, and fights want on this side and on that, and bears humiliation, putting it under his feet, without losing faith in God, and saying to all the world, 'I can be poor, and yet be a man.' O crown him! You pass him by; but you do not know what you are passing by. Kings sometimes walk incognito, and then they do not wear crowns. There are kings in your streets. There are men walking about in your midst that wear crowns in their hearts, which, if they were to put them on their heads, would shine so bright that you would think that twilight had dawned.

There are thousands who understand and obey the injunction of the Apostle, when he says, 'Quit you like men; be strong.' I tell you they are heroes, and angels know it, if you do not. And angels know what to write down. When you laid the foundation of that big house, they forgot to record that in heaven. And when the walls went up, and the beautiful apartments were finished, and the whole magnificent structure was completed, of the architecture of which you were so proud, as sure as you live they forgot to put that down. And when you unfurled your rich carpet, and hung your fine pictures, they forgot to make a note of that.

But when that man went down out of his splendid mansion into a fourth-class house, in an obscure street, shudding, it may be, some tears, as a tribute of nature, and gathered his little flock on the first evening around the fire, and made the room bright with love and faith and prayer, you may be certain that they put that down. They remember that. And when that man went on from day to day and from week to week, there was not one generous purpose of fidelity, there was not one thing that made him a man in his trouble that God did not see, that angels did not behold, and that by-and-by will not be sung in glory in heaven."

How IT FEELS TO DIE.—One day last week a young man in Hamilton, Ohio was run over by a locomotive, and so badly mangled that he died in a few hours. The poor fellow was carried into a house near the road, and a physician was brought to him in a very short time; but it was evident that he was beyond human help. He conversed cheerfully with his acquaintances who came in to see him, and said he felt well. Soon afterwards, turning to the physician, he asked, "Did you give me something to put me to sleep, Doctor?" The doctor replied that he had not. "Then I'm dying!" exclaimed the poor fellow, with superhuman energy; and after giving a brief direction to have his friends in a distant State notified of his death, he expired.

Ten dollars will buy a broad-cloth coat, eight dollars a traveling suit, and thirty-two cents a pair of kid gloves in London. If the cable was only a ferry eh?

Sinful vows must be repeated. God would rather have us break our word than his word.

Mississippi Crops, &c.

The Liberty (Amite county) Advocate says no damage has been done there as yet by the worm, and the crop is good according to the land in cultivation and hands employed. The freedmen are doing well for themselves and employers, owing chiefly to the absence of the bureau, and the fact that they are mostly working on shares.

The Panola Star says the cotton crop of that county will reach about 12,000 bales against 30,000 before the war.

The Liberty (Miss.) Herald urges the establishment of a cotton factory in Amite county.

The Lexington Advertiser says:

The crops in the valley are excellent, so much so that the people are going to leave the hill lands and move into the valley. Every foot of cultivated land in the Yazoo valley will be turned under by the plow next year. Colonel Joseph Lovell has from eight hundred to one thousand acres in cotton, and will clear, after paying all expenses, $50,000. Latham & Smith, it is estimated, will clear, after paying all expenses, $30,000. Birdwell & Judge Simmons will clear $20,000. Birdwell and Simmons have fifty acres in corn that will yield 2,500 bushels. Mr. Tucker will clear $30,000. Mr. Wellington Jenkins has one hundred acres in cotton that will clear him $3,000. The farmers next year will have none of the formidable disadvantages to contend with, in the way of bad seed, that they experienced the first of this year. Next year there will be plenty of fresh seed, and the season will, it is hoped, be favorable to all planting interests. There is no manufacturer's stock that will pay such a dividend as a good farm, well cultivated, in Central Mississippi.

SUNRISE.—How beautiful the scene! pen cannot paint, or that has not seen, imagine the splendor of this morn. On one side piles of rich, crimson clouds recline upon a bed of brilliant purple; on the other, the sky of the most delicate hue that ever enlivened the heavens, is shaded with a delicate pink, while splendid arches, in form like heaven's own radiant bow, but glowing with a vivid, rosy tint, seem to encircle both earth and sky; two lovely stars though rendered paler by the glare around, shine like diamonds in azure sky; from yonder meads a silver mist ascends, veiling, not concealing the verdant turf, as if earth offered her morning incense to her Maker; while the gentle robin pours forth a strain so sweet, so clear, as though the beauty of the scene gladdened his little heart and bade him sing his matin hymn in louder tones. Look where you may on nature's face, the hand of the Creator is easily discerned; it is seen in the glories of the breaking morn, visible when the shades of evening encircle the earth and sky, and seen amid the splendor of the storm, when the thunder's roar proclaims his power, and the lightning's flash, that comes, we know not whence, lighting for a moment both earth and heaven, then flies we know not whither, speaks in plain language, an Almighty Maker. What are all the proudest wishes of man compared with the slightest of his Creator?

The meaneast insect and the simplest flower proclaim his wisdom and portray his power. Morning, farewell! a scene like this may never meet mine eye again, but ne'er shall I forget it.

THE CHARACTER OF AMERICAN WOMEN. Some time ago a weekly newspaper in New York, the Round Table, charged extensive intemperance upon the women of America, and, in an elaborate article, attempted to prove that intemperance prevailed to a fearful extent among the women in the highest social circles. Since this charge was made there has been an almost universal denial of it on the part of the American press, and we think it can be said, without any fear of contradiction, that for sobriety and as examples of purity and virtue the women of America may fearlessly challenge comparison with their sex in other lands. We feel sure that, compared with the male sex in this country in the matter of sobriety, they stand out as shining examples.

Gen. Dick Gano, late of the Confederate army, has taken to the pulpit. He preached at Canebird Church, Bourbon county. During the war he officiated in his person three very dissimilar offices, and his friends said, made them entirely compatible, viz: General—Surgeon—Chaplain. In a word, he commanded the boys in grace to charge—he splintered the fractured limb—and administered words of consolation to the dying soldier. He is said to resemble his gifted and eloquent father, John Allen Gano, in eloquence as well as in person.

His sermons are carefully prepared and agreeably delivered; his exhortation to the old soldier is to become a true "soldier of the Cross."

A contemporary says: "The Republicans carried, at Mitchell, in their procession a few weeks ago, a piece of domestic with this inscription on it: 'Johnson and Judas—Twin Brothers.' This is the way they talk now about the President. Two years ago, had the Democrats carried such a flag, they would have denounced it as the worst kind of treason, and had the bearers immured in a dungeon. They had a man in Fort Lafayette, who was taken from Michigan and imprisoned because his wife hung up a rag through which she had been straining blackberries, because somebody said it was a rebel flag. What should be done with them, now?"

ANOTHER NEGRO DUEL.—The Richmond Times gives an account of a duel between two negroes, which took place in the Chickahominy Swamp on Saturday. They used double-barreled guns, and fired at thirty paces distance. One was shot through the arm, and there the matter ended. The trouble was about a woman, who after the duel, married the wounded man.

Mrs. Sarah Higgins, aged seventy-eight years, died in the Park Street Presbyterian church at Syracuse, New York, a few Sundays ago, while at the communion table.

CAUTION.—Agents and the public are warned against an attempt of C. B. Richardson, Publisher, to thrust upon the public certain Annals of the War, gathered from the four corners of the newspapers and arranged by me as pioneers of an original and elaborate work.
